BISMARCK.

THE "MAN OF IRON AND BLOOD" IN THE NORTH GERMAN PARLIAMENT — HIS CAUSTIC SEVERITY ON THE ALLEGED CAUSES OF THE WAR.

The meeting of the German Federal Parliament in Berlin has given occasion to many scenes of profound interest. In the session of the second day, Count Bismarck presented a summary view of the situation, commenting with caustic severity on the alleged causes of the war, and exposing the deceitful pretensions of the Imperial government. A spectator of the proceedings of the occasion gives a dramatic sketch of Bismarck in a letter to a Vienna journal:

"The president had already closed the session, and the members were about leaving the hall, when he rose, and requested them to again take their seats, as the Chancellor of the Confederation had a communication to make to the House. A general murmur was heard, and the crowd pressed into the galleries in order to gain a better sight. Bismarck then made his appearance, his cheeks pale, and deep furrows under his eyes. A broad shouldered, strong boned figure, in the uniform of a cavalry colonel, dark blue with yellow. The yellow of his uniform collar contrasted strangely with the deadly paleness of his face.

He took his place to the left of the president. Near him lay a black leather portfolio. In this was concealed the fate of two nations.

He searched for the key and opened the little brass lock, and then drew out a few sheets of paper—sheets in which lay the dreadful war that was to destroy so many thousand lives and bring so many families to ruin.

He gave a hasty glance at the first, and then began to speak. There was the stillness of death. Count Bismarck is no orator, in the usual sense of the term. He speaks without fluency, and with very little pathos. He has nothing less at heart than this. His words come out in broken form. He expresses what he has to say, only in short sentences. He often hesitates. He pauses and then hesitates again. His language never flows in a living stream. His speeches, which read as if they came from a single gush, are always fragmentary when they fall from his lips. You see that he labors as he speaks. One who heard him to-day for the first time might believe that the burden of the feelings which weighed upon his heart took away his breath, that every word was wrung out from the depths of his inner man. Yet he always speaks in this way. While he expresses himself with the utmost facility in private conversation, his language becomes slow and difficult as soon as he addresses a public assembly. What he said to the excited and eager members of the House is already known to every one that reads the newspapers. It was the keenest and most subtle criticism of the pretenses on which the French government had gone to war. A slight vein of irony run through his whole discourse, the effect of which on the hearer was heightened by the subdued tone of its delivery. Not a line in the countenance of the Chancellor was altered as he took up one sheet after another and declared its contents. No mocking contraction of the mouth accompanied the points which he made against the Cabinet of Napoleon. No trace of approval or of disapproval betrayed his personal interest in the subject. In the same quiet, business like manner he called the declaration of war "the only official communication which he had received from the Imperial Government in the whole affair," analyzed the private negotiations which had been entertained between the Ministry and the French Ambassador, characterized the interview at Ems, and finally referred to the unsuccessful attempt at mediation by England. The latter sheet was the French original of the declaration of war—a piece of paper like all the rest—distinguished by no special mark—as Bismarck there took it in his hands—not even by the slightest change in his features, or the least wavering of his tone, he coolly remarked that the text of the declaration of war was already known in the German translation, and asked the Parliament to excuse him for the unfinished sketch of a circular to the foreign ministers. This was the last word of Bismarck at the session, at which no one could have been present without being penetrated with the power and wide bearing of acts which it took but twenty or thirty minutes and six or seven pieces of paper to make unchangeable. We who have hitherto become acquainted with historical documents only after they have grown mouldy in the archives, here had them before us in their fresh odor and their modern aspect. There is nothing there to be seen of sentiment or enthusiasm; all this comes afterward—after the flow of tears and blood. And of these we shall this time have no lack."

Cash Value of a Laboring Man.

Under this caption the Portsmouth (N. H.) Chronicle has the following sensible article:

It is often remarked by persons who do not possess any property, and who depend upon their daily labor for support of themselves and families, that they are "worth nothing," financially speaking. This language is generally indulged in by men in the community who style themselves business men. Let us examine the question financially and see if their assertions are correct.

Last year the price of common labor averaged $1.50 per day. Admitting that the laborer received $1 50 per day, and it required the whole of that sum to support his family, nevertheless we contend that the laborer was worth in cash to his family the sum of $7,980.

The amount he would receive for one year's labor at $1.50 per day would be $475 60, which amount would be interest at six per cent, on $7,980, which latter sum would be the cash value of the laboring man to his family.

The cash value of the laboring man to the community is much more than the above-named sum, as labor is the only true wealth of any country. Without labor our forces, furnaces, woollen-mills, and indeed manufactures of all kinds, would cease to be. The music of the loom and shuttle would be silenced forever. Our national and other banks would close their doors, and our most enterprising merchants take in their signs. Without labor civilization would recede, and the bat and owl soon occupy the crimson chambers of our would-be business men.

Let the laboring men of the United States realize their true position. Let them reflect that labor is honorable, that labor is wealth. Let them remember that they are a power in the State; that to them this great Government is indebted for all it possesses of liberty, glory and grandeur.

Let them only reflect, that labor is honorable; but let those who look down on the humble laborer and mechanic reflect for one moment before they speak in terms of disparagement of the "hewers of wood and the drawers of water." The custom is too prevalent in the community of making remarks in a sneering manner of the great industrial mass of our people, leading youths among us to think that honest industry is not honorable, be it what it may. That time has passed.

Honest, industrious mechanics and laborers are the wealth of States, and until they are encouraged and fostered our people cannot be prosperous. It is not the cash value alone by which he enriches the place of his residence, but he adds by his labor to its material wealth. No country or nation can command the respect of the world unless that respect was gained through the skill of her mechanical population. Then let all classes, more especially the rich, respect and inculcate their children with the true dignity of life, that labor is honorable, and it is after life misfortune should overtake them willing hands will be put forth to earn their support.

How Rachel Read the Marseillaise.

On the 20th of March, 1848, Rachel appeared in "Les Horaces." The performance had gone off very well, and "Camille" had launched her curses against Rome with the usual applause. The curtain had fallen, when a voice called for the "Marseillaise." It was soon followed by another and another, until the whole house swelled into one cry, "La Marseillaise!"

A few minutes of this burst and the curtain went up and "Camille" came forward without her Roman peplum, simple and grand in her white tunic. She came forward to the footlights with slow and majestic step. Never have we seen anything more terrible, more thrilling, than that entry. The whole house shuddered with terror before the actress had uttered one of those words of power. That mark of livid pallor; that deep, dark glance of suffering and of rebellion blazing in its bloodshot orbit; those eyebrows twisted in serpent wreaths; those lips depressed, holding in their superb curve a hurricane of prayers, and ready to sound the trumpet of malediction; those passionate nostrils inflated as if with the breath of a new atmosphere after issuing from the fetid dens of Bastiles—all produced a crushing effect; it was a terrific grace, a sinister beauty, inspiring alarm with admiration. When the actress, poised like a statue, drew herself up to her full height, and then with undulating movement showing the contour of her person beneath the long folds of her train, and raising her arm with tranquil force laid bare her shoulder by the fall of her sleeve, it seemed as though Nemesis, the tardy goddess, had suddenly stepped to life from a block of Greek marble sculptured by an invisible hand. Then, with a voice irritating, strident, and monotonous as an alarm-bell, she began:

Allons! Enfans de la Patrie!

Not song, not recitative; a species of antique declamation, wherein the verse marches afoot, now flies aloft, a strange mystic music escaping the composer's notation, resembling, not reproducing, the song of Rouget de Pisle. Masculine as the hymn, with such great musical force, Rachel had the secret of making it still more energetic, more fierce, more formidable by the incisive bitterness, the revengeful murmur, and the metallic click of her diction. She had attitude, gestures, and carriage wonderfully expressive, in accord with the sense of each stanza. As she proudly uplifts her neck free at last from the yoke, and shakes off the foot of the oppressor that had so long held her, stoops to the dust, what a pile up magazine of hate! what an undying thirst for vengeance, are betrayed in those clenched hands, in the nerves trembling with the cold insensibility of resolution implacable! And with what tenper effusion, melting into tears at the sacred idea of the country, she knee downs, as it were, lost in the voluminous folds of the symbolic tricolor! At the sublime posture the house reechoed with transports of enthusiasm. Bravos, clapping of hands, and stamping came up in one continuous thunder roll.

This was how Rachel interpreted the hymn of the nation. Rachel, like Malibran, was devoured by the fire of her own genius; the victim was consumed whole on the altar. Events have come and gone, and now the house of Moliere vibrates again with that glorious appeal. This time it is still the tragic muse that gives us the lines of "Tyrtaeus," lines which, as Carnot said, were worth a hundred thousand fighting men. The sculpture-like beauty of Mlle. Agar, her marble pallor, her tresses black as the raven's wing, her deep, sympathetic voice—now thrilling with tenderness, now clear and echoing like a trumpet call—make this one of the noblest impersonations of the mighty patriotic war ode. If Rachel had the air of Nemesis the Avenger, Agar reminds us of Victory outspreading her wings of gold. She does not sing, she is not a singer, but she throws melody into her recitation, and the effect is very grand. It was certainly a daring enterprise to declaim those sublime apostrophes on the very boards whereon Rachel had cried aloud with so fearful an emphasis; but bravery has been successful and the intelligent actress varied her expression. Her style was heroic impulse and assurance of triumph.

How the Dead Soldiers are to be Identified.

A Berlin letter in the London Telegraph says:

"Mark one instance of the German practical spirit, as a proof of the fashion after which those Teutons prepare to fight. In recent wars popular feeling has demanded that rank and file, Captains and Generals, shall be equally and impartially mentioned in the lists of the slain; but difficulties have arisen, because the enemy cannot know the dead men's names, and when the muster roll is called after the battle, the missing may be only wounded or prisoners. Germany has, in her solid, calm manner, arranged, in view of this difficulty, that each wife and mother shall speedily know the best or the worst about those who go to fight "with God, for King, and Fatherland." Slips of parchment, like luggage labels, have been prepared, on which the name of each German soldier is plainly written, and one of these will be fastened inside his coat when he goes into action. After the day is decided, the enemy, if he be master of the battlefield, will be requested to collect and return these labels, of which about a million have been provided, grim tickets for an unknown journey! Think of the German wife, mother or daughter sewing it on—the battle ticket of her stake in the quarrel—the address of her particular material of war, the awful traveling label whereon no loving hand may write "With care," seeing that its bearer goes into the Valley of the Shadow, to come forth again or not as Heaven shall decree.

Sewn on with German thread, ripped off, perchance, with French knife, whose pockets and parcels of these little human memoranda will surely be returned; but yet every man who buttons his coat over the label of death has looked his fate full in the face, and made himself ready for burial."

A gentleman of Stamford, Conn., is raising a crop of cotton with every prospect of success. It is not very extensive, but it illustrates perfectly the tropical nature of the present summer, even in the cool shades of black New England. The seed of this cotton was sown in a hotbed in April, and the plants were set out about the middle of May. The flowers appeared to-day, and the bulbs are already fully formed. More promising cotton cannot now be seen in Georgia.

FALLING IN LOVE.—It is only in the sunshine that one can really fall in love. Winter and the fire-side and the necessity of conversation, give love making a semi-practical air, which robs it of all joy and congeniality. The sunshine pours around its own bright, indistinct, vivifying haze. Sport with Amaryllis in the shade, and the sport ends with proposals and calculations of the prosaic order; but pure poetry broods over that nest in the deep fern where the sunbeam glances from tress after tress as one toys with the tangles of Neæra's hair. It is difficult to be at once serious and hot. With the thermometer at 60 it is physically impossible to be impassioned or to lavish vows of an ardent affection. "Forever and forever" loses any absurd definiteness. What is really possible is to lie in a sunny blissfulness and to break one's Nirvana of enjoyment now and then by a whisper of delight. Then "to enjoy is all the art we know." Old things have passed away—the governor's growl over our Oxbridge bills, mamma's lectures over that waltz with young Prodigal—and all things have become new. It is amazing to think that we are bored by old Twaddle at breakfast. It is hard to believe that one will be bored again by him at dinner. Here in the fern-leaves, with the sun overhead and Neæra half dozing over Lothair, boredom seems impossible. It is this transformation of life, this banishment of its ugliness and its bother, which gives such zest to falling in love.

Love is simply vulgarized when it stoops to entangle itself with puzzles about papa's consent and problems about butcher's bills. It's true life is the life of pure fancy. One knows that to assert Neæra's red hair to be "golden" is an absolute defiance of fact; but then half the charm of love making lies in defiance of fact. One knows amid all one's protestations of constancy that Clarissa's golden hair will be red to-morrow; but in the sunshine there is no to-morrow. It is the height of human enjoyment to get rid of the trammels of fact and time, to assert the impossible, to believe the incredible. For love is perfectly insolvent in the challenge it hurls at common sense. Major Pendennis wonders how the boy can love a woman old enough to be his mother; but Arthur flings himself just as ardently at Miss Costigan's feet. What are her years to him? She is ever young, ever fair. Is it possible to see crow's feet round eyes at which one gazes with the ardor of a first affection? She is one's eldest sister, and one's eldest sister is an old maid, but she—she is Phyllis, and age flies from her. She is the standing exception to arithmetic and the calendar. When the inevitable break comes, what tears we shed over that match which we have so elaborately planned? It is true that Phyllis is over thirty, and no planning can bring the match nearer than five or six years; but we have all some sublime satisfaction of flinging ourselves into our pocket handkerchief, and sobbing our heart out. Only let us sob in sunshine. It is the sunshine that gives sweetness to our tears, as it gives an Arcadian innocence to the Platonic friendship we swear to the pretty hand on whose fingers lie a marriage ring. One does not want social facts to disappear, but sunshine throws a charming haze around them. The ring is present, but it ceases to be oppressive. One is free to sentimentalize on the happiness that might have been, and to sketch lightly the perfect blankness of life that is; but it is too hot to push the thesis beyond the realm of sentiment. It is in remaining within the limits of that realm that we can alone taste the bliss of "falling in love." People of a soberer, practical sort, can walk into love as sensibly and unpoetically as they can walk out of it. People of an ardent, impassioned sort, can fling themselves into ecstacies that pass our understanding. But to fall in love without prose, without ecstacy—to get all the beauty and grace, and variety of affection out of life, without passion, and without boredom, and without entanglement—is an art reserved for golden spirits who know the virtue of moderation, and "how to let it alone."—Saturday Review.

THE war news for two days past has been but a recapitulation, in fuller detail, of recent engagements and military movements, with increasing indications of a speedy crisis in the way of a battle without, or a revolution within the walls of Paris.

A PATENT has just been issued to Mr. Wm. H. Downing, of Pioneer, on a tubing clamp.

THE business of Franklin is decidedly improving, owing to the successful oil development in that vicinity.

HUNDREDS of mechanics and laborers have been thrown out of employment at Corry by the stoppage of the Climax Mower machine shops.

WE hear that two men working on the track at Tryonville were run over by the train and instantly killed. Our informant did not learn their names.

THE Burtis well at Pithole, an old landmark there, was struck by lightning yesterday afternoon, and the derrick and oil tank destroyed, but the well is still pumping. No person was injured.

WE regret to notice that our former townsman, Charles L Wheeler, has met with a severe domestic bereavement, in the death of his infant son, Harry Sumner Wheeler, which took place in Pittsburgh, on Monday last.

THE Methodist Episcopal Sunday School pic-nic, at the grove yesterday afternoon, was apruptly dispersed by the rain storm, but not until the school had discussed with a good deal of satisfaction the contents of their lunch baskets.

FOR the benefit of those who propose joining in the formation of a military company in this city, we present in another column a synopsis of the law relative to such organizations. We are indebted to Mr. Turner for the compilation.

PICTURES OF THE WAR.—Howe, at the Postoffice, has received Every Saturday, Frank Leslie's and Punchinello for this week. The two former contain sketches of the battle-fields of Woerth and Weissenburg, and many other scenes of peculiar interest at the theater of war.

THE GRINDERPEST has broken out on Franklin street and is spreading its dire effects in the immediate vicinity. The boarders at the Bush and Mansion have a dejected and reckless appearance, and should the young man who grinds the organ at the snake show not improve as a performer or change his list of tunes, he will fall a victim to "temporary insanity."

BOILER EXPLOSION AT PITHOLE.—On Wednesday a boiler belonging to a well located upon the bluff territory, in the rear of Prather city, and near the town of Adamsville, exploded, throwing a young man by the name of Irwin several rods in the air, injuring him so severely that amputation of the leg was necessary, and the operation successfully performed by Dr. Wynne, of this city.

POLICE COURT. — BEFORE JUSTICE CLARK, August 25.—John Feigle was arrested on the complaint of Gregory & Ober for grand larceny, the charge being being that he entered their shop and stole a clock. The jury found him not guilty.

BEFORE JUSTICE STROUSE.—John Parkerson was arrested by John Blackman on Water street, for being drunk and disorderly. He was fined $5 and costs, on the payment of which he was discharged.

OUR HYMENIAL COLUMN contains this morning another announcement, in which it will be seen the exemplary example set by "Jerry" a few months since, has been followed by "William". Such is life! We come forth like a hopper grass and we cut down as sparrow grass. Like sheep in a pasture, let one jump the fence, and the flock follows. But seriously the young couple have our congratulations and best wishes for their future happiness.

THE CONCERT LAST EVENING.—Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, a fair audience assembled at the hall last evening. The performance in its different parts was highly creditable. The execution of Mr. Sidman on the piano was very brilliant. Miss Baker sang very sweetly and with cultivated taste. The duet by Miss Baker and Mrs. Holmes was thoroughly appreciated. Messrs Georgi & Brown's piano was in use on the occasion, and its superior merits were fully tested.

An Eight-Hundred Barrel Well.

The following dispatch was received last evening by Dr. Roberts:

TARR FARM, Pa Aug. 25.

The Carpenter well, No. 1, Shaw Farm, was torpedoed to-day by J. Sanders with a Roberts torpedo, and increased its production from twenty barrels per day to eight hundred barrels per day. It is owned by Keeler, Stook & Co. It is flowing through two pipes from three and a quarter inch casing without any tubing being in the well.

JAMES SANDERS.

FATAL STROKE OF LIGHTNING—TWO MEN KILLED.—About half past four o'clock yesterday afternoon, during the severe thunder storm that prevailsd in this section, a derrick on a new well on the Great Republic tract, about a mile southeast of Shamburg, belonging to Jonathan Watson, Jas. Pettigru, Superintendent, was struck by lightning and two men, Richard Sweet and Nelson Francisco, who were in the derrick at the time were instantly killed. Mr. Sweet was engaged in drilling and Mr. Francisco was sitting on a stool in the corner of the derrick, at the moment of their instantaneous death. The person of the former exhibited few external marks of injury, except upon the foot and breast, though his clothes were considerably burned. The other unfortunate man was thrown violently to the floor and his lip and forehead cut. The derrick was shattered, the lightning having descended one corner of it and the rope. It was noted that the links of the silver chain worn by Richard Sweet were separated, also the case of his watch. Mr. Sweet had followed the occupation of drilling some four years; he was a single man, twenty-four years of age. He has a brother at Shamburg, of the firm of Jones & Sweet. His remains will be taken today to Sandy Hill, N. Y., his former risidence. Mr. Francisco was about forty-five years of age, lived at Shamburg and leaves a family to mourn his untimely death. He was making a friendly call on Swift, who, when the storm came up, was warned to "shut down," but thought the precaution unnecessary.

RACES.—At two o'clock yesterday afternoon many spectators were in attendance to witness the deciding heat of the pacers Jim and Maggie Mitchell. The betting public was greatly interested in the result, and some assert that twenty thousand dollars depend upon the issue.

The horses had scored twice, when a severe thunder storm set in and the rain fell in torrents, compelling the spectators to seek the shelter of the stand and their umbrellas and carriages and the unhappy drenched and shivering wearers of linen coats anathematized their luck, the sky and the races in a wholesale malediction. The flooded condition of the track rendered it absolutely unsafe for the horses to start with such a slippery and precarious footing, and accordingly the judges decided to postpone this heat as well as the attractive programme of the day until this afternoon at two o'clock. The tickets were returned at the gate.

THE MILITARY MEETING.—Pursuant to notice, a meeting was held at Union Hall last evening by the friends of the new military organization about to be formed in this city, in accordance with the laws of the Commonwealth, Mr. S. H. Birdsall in the chair. About thirty persons were present. Mr. J. K. Turner read a letter from the Adjutant General, reciting the necessary steps and proceedings to be adopted in the premises. On motion a committee, consisting of J. W. Jewhurst, T. J. Crossley, and A. B. Kingsland, was appointed by the chair, to report names of permanent officers to be submitted for inction to the next meeting, and the meeting thereupon adjourned to meet at the same place on Saturday evening next at 8 o'clock for the election of officers.

OUR city subscribers sometimes complain that their morning paper is missing or left in the wet. They can obviate this inconvenience by putting up a box at the gate. Mr. J. J. Sutter has constructed a newspaper box for his own use, on which he should take out a patent. But he is opposed to monopolies, and will make them to order for any one without charging any bonus. The box has a lid that closes of itself and glass front. It is the best and cheapest thing out of doors. Mr. Sutter is at Davis' tank shop, but his box is stationary at his residence, Walnut, near Washington street.

THE NEW SILVER PIECES.—Specimens of a new silver coinage of the denomination of ten, twenty and twenty-five cents, have just been struck at the United States mint in Philadelphia. Three different specimens of each of these denominations have been submitted to the treasury department for approval. The standard value of the new coins is reduced to correspond in actual value with a view to its immediate use, instead of the ten, twenty-five and fifty cent notes. The public generall will rejoice to learn that we are to be relieved in a measure from the filthy lucre known as "fractional currency."

MISS ESTELLE THOMPSON'S READINGS.—An entertainment consisting of dramatic, humorous and pathetic recitations, will be given at Corinthian Hall, on Monday evening next, by Miss Estelle Thompson, of Philadelphia. The selections comprise much that is new, and yet of standard character, well adapted to the versatile powers and accomplishments which Miss Thompson has the reputation of possessing. Miss Thompson is a young lady of brilliant and attractive presence, and her proficiency in the art of elocution has been attested before large audiences and by the best literary critics. We find commendatory notices in the N. Y. Evening Post, the N. Y. Herald, &c., although a new candidate for public favor. We find in the Vineland, N. J., Independent a reference to her first appearance in this capacity, by which it will be seen that her success was decided at the outset of her professional career. The Independent says:

The announcement that Miss Estelle Thomson would make her first appearance as a public reader, caused quite a flutter in certain circles; and at the time appointed a very select audience assembled at Merchant's Hall, to greet the fair debutante.

The curtain rose at the proper time, and Miss Estelle, dressed in white, with high corsage, puffed sleeve, long train, very elaborately and handsomely trimmed, entered, and in the most graceful, self-possessed manner opened the entertainment by a few well-timed and appropriate remarks, modestly, but clearly and distinctly uttered and proceeded at once to recite, with wonderful skill, the pieces announced in the programme. She seemed utterly unconscious of the novelty of her position, and if she experienced any feeling of trepidation, she had the consumate art to conceal it carefully from our keen scrutiny.

Miss Thompson has an expressive face, beautiful large black eyes, a graceful figure and a mind of no mean order.

In conclusion, we regard Miss Thompson's success as assured.

It is needless to say that the fair debutante was the recipient of rare and exquisite floral offerings."

SWEET'S AMUSEMENT DIRECTORY AND TRAVELER'S GUIDE. By O. P. Sweet, 1870.

We have received a copy of Sweet's Directory and Traveler's Guide from the Atlantic to the Pacific, containing historical sketches and statistical records, with population, railway and steamboat transit, public buildings, halls, hotels, newspapers, printers, bill posters, baggage expresses, etc., with maps of the railroad and steamboat routes, and distances between places. The book contains 500 pages, carefully indexed, and interspersed with crayon illustrations of leading professional artists. This is the first complete work of the kind ever got up in this country. It embraces an immense fund of information of the greatest utility to the traveling public; as an amusement guide and directory it is unapproachable. Two pages are devoted to Titusville, and following a well written sketch of the city, refering to such matters as are most interesting to the travelling exhibitor and commercial men, as to halls, hotels and printing offices. The same plan is pursued with other places, large and small. In fact this publication supplies a great want in the business world, and got up as it is, at immense expense, it is very cheap at the price, $3.00.

GREAT FIRES IN CANADA.—Concerning the recent great fires in Canada, the Kingston, Ont. News of the 19th inst. says: "On the north side of the Ottawa river, in the Gatineau, there was great destruction. On Wednesday night the lumber in Gilmour & Co.'s piling ground about 6,000,000 feet was burned; also the frame houses occupied by the laborers, who lost everything. The lumber was insured for $40,000. The loss not covered by insurance will be fully $25,000. The works at the Hull iron mines were also burned and half a dozen houses consumed. The loss is probably $15,000. West of the Hull mountain, 6 or 7 miles north of the city, a man named Pink is said to have been burned to death; also two women and three children, names not given. The destruction of property within twenty miles of Ottawa is estimated at $700,000 or $800,000. The wind has gone down so that present danger is over; but if the wind should rise the prospect is fearful to contemplate. Last Thursday evening the fires in the woods were within half a mile of the village, with 4,000 inhabitants on the opposite bank of the Ottawa river. One hundred men with pails of water were checking the fire. If a gale were to set in the city would hardly escape.

THE French mail steamship Pereire has just made the quickest time on record, leaving Brest on the 13th of August, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and arriving at the port of New York on Monday morning, the run across taking but eight days and about eleven hours.

Letter from Petrolia, Ont.

PETROLIA, August 22.

Editors Morning Herald:

As no Wyoming news will issue for some weeks, and as some of your prominent oil men are interested in lands here, I think it advisable to give a little further description of the late splendid strikes on lots 11-12 Con. Enniskillen. The Craise well is fully up to 300 barrels per day. The Cole well, about 200 rods west of it, yields some 120 barrels per day. The Lamb well, about the same distance east, yields from 10 to 15 barrels per day, and is increasing. There are some forty new wells going down, spread over the southeast of that lot and the Shoemaker lot. Amonst the operators I notice Harry Prince, nearly down, Mr. Lamb No. 2, Mr. Polly, Mr. Lewis, Mr. Fysh, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Jones, Mr. Blackburn, &c. The place is quite alive with machinery going in and oil going out.

The production this week has been about 1,000 barrels per day, and sales limited, as producers are not inclined to accept the prices offered by refiners; $1.25 was offered and $1.40 asked. I fancy between these figures is the ruling price now.

The export firms are still busy, and business in their line brisk, filling old contracts. The shipment is about the same.

The price of land about the Craise well is from $600 to $1,000 per acre, or one-fourth royalty. The most of the wells going down are on leases. By the next fourteen days we shall have thoroughly proved this territory. In the meantime, if any new strikes occur, I will let you know. M. P.

Persons subject to Military duty and shall not hereafter become a member of some Military organization, shall pay to the Collector of taxes, in the City, County, or Township in which he shall reside, which sum shall exempt him from liability to perform Military duty, except under orders to prevent invasion, insurrection or riots. The County treasurers shall hold such Military tax as a brigade Military fund, and shall disburse the same to each person who shall be a member of an organization of the National Guard in said County, out of the Military fund, not exceeding twelve dollars per annum, to be paid to such members, one-half at the date of the organization or election of commissioned officers, but not until after he shall have furnished himself with the proper uniform, and the balance at the close of the first year, and thereafter semi-annually, in proportion of the number of times such member shall attend the regular drills and parades of the organization.

8th. Each company commander shall make out a full and complete report of the number of men in his company, the number of parades and encampments in which the company shall have participated, the amount received from the military board, the amount of ordnance stores in possession of the company, and transmit the same to the Adjutant General of the State, on or before the 1st of October in each year, under a penalty of one hundred dollars for each failure to make such return, which fine shall be paid into the brigade fund of the county.

THE WEED SEWING MACHINE.—Messrs. French & Wallace have taken the agency for this popular machine for several counties in this vicinity, with headquarters at Titusville. They will soon open out with a large stock of the various styles of machines of this manufacture. The reputation of the Weed Machine is too well-known to need lengthy comment; enough to say that they give universal satisfaction.

PETROLEUM.—In this market 8,000 bbls. refined were sold for August and September at a round price of 26c. From Philadelphia nothing authentic is reported. We learn from private sources that 15,000 bbls. crude oil were sold between New York and the Creek, but the price cannot be named. It is reported that Messrs. Egbert & Brown, one of the best and most favorably known houses in the trade have suspended payment. Their liabilities have not been ascertained. The high personal and commercial character of the gentlemen constituting this firm have caused their failure to be regarded with sincere regret by the entire trade.—N. Y. Bulletin, Aug. 23.

TO OIL OPERATORS.

TORPEDOES!

THE ROBERTS'

PETROLEUM

TORPEDO COMPANY

Office at the

Red Planing Mill,

Corner of Pine and Second Sts.

(Near the Railroad,)

Titusville, Pa.

Owing to the large and increasing demand for the Roberts' Torpedoes, and the late decision of the Commissioner of Patents in refusing to Wm. Reed a patent, and the decision of Judge R. C. Grier sustaing the Roberts' patent they have LOWERED the price of their Torpedoes so that every Operator can afford to try a Torpedo before abandoning a Well.

Twenty per Cent,,

The following is the decision rendered by Judge Grier on the twenty-second (22d) day of September, 1869, in the United States Circuit Court at Philadelphia. The case was argued three days by Charles M. Keller of New York, B. F. Lucas and S. A. Purviance of Pittsburgh, for defendants, and George Harding of Philadelphia, and George H. Christy, of Pittsburgh, for plaintiff.

OPINION OF JUDGE GRIER.

As I write with difficulty I can only state the conclusions to which my mind has come after a careful examination of this case.

The complainant has exhibited a patent dated 25th April, 1865. This is prima facie evidence of a good title, and puts on the respondents the burthen of proof that the patent is void or worthless.

I need not repeat my remarks in the case of Goodyear vs. Day (2 Wall, C. C. Rep. 298), but now adopt them as affording a rule of decision which applies clearly to the present case.

As the infringement of the patent is admitted the only question will be as to the validity of complainant's patent of April 25, 1865.

"It was after speculation had been reduced to practice," and after repeated experiments, that the complainant succeeded in overcoming the prejudice and ignorance of the people on the subject, and persuading the public that his invention was useful; after he had established its great utility and value, and "when his genius and patient perseverance, in spite of sneers and scoffs," were completely successful, that Reed, who had before made experiments on the same subject, and was wholly unsuccessful, imagined that he has the best right to the invention, and after purchasing one or more of complainant's torpedoes he applied on the 1st of November, 1867, for a patent for substantially the same combination of devices or machines contained in complainant's patent. On the 15th of the same month the respondents formed themselves into a company or corporation called "The Reed Torpedo Company," for the purpose of pirating the complainant's invention and supporting the expense of litigation and thus defraud him of its fruits. They have persevered, even after the preliminary injunction very properly granted by the District Judge.

Let a decree be entered for complainant for a perpetual injunction, and a Master appointed to take an account according to the prayer of the bill.

R. C. GRIER, Circuit Judge.

NOTE—The passage referred to by Judge Grier, in his former decision, 2 Wallace, p. 299, adopted as applicable to this case, was as follows:

"It is usually the case, when any valuable discovery is made, or any new machine of great utility has been invented, that the attention of the public has been turned to that subject previously, and that many persons have been making researches and experiments. Philosophers and mechanicians may have in some measure anticipated in their speculations the possibility or probability of such discovery or invention; many experiments may have been unsuccessfully tried, coming very near, yet falling short of the desired result. They have produced nothing beneficial. The invention when perfected, may truly be said to be the culminating point of many experiments, not only by the inventor, but by many others. He may have profited indirectly by the unsuccessful experiments and failures of others, but it gives them no right to claim a share of the honor of the profit of the successful inventor. It is when speculation has been reduced to practice, when experiment has resulted in discovery, and when that discovery has been perfected by patient and continued experiments, when some new compound, art, manufacture, or machine has been thus produced which is useful to the public, that the party making it becomes a public benefactor and entitled to a patent.

"And yet when genius and patient perseverence have at length succeeded, in spite of sneers and scoffs, in perfecting some valuable invention or discovery, how seldom is it followed by reward. Envy robs him of the honor, while speculators, swindlers, and pirates rob him of the profits. Every unsuccessful experimenter who did not come very near making a discovery now claims it. Every one who can invent an improvement or vary its form, claims a right to pirate the original discovery. We need not summon Morse, or Blanchard, or Wordworth to prove that this is the usual history of every great discovery or invention.

"The present case adds another chapter to this long and uniform history."—2 Wallace, C. C. Reports p. 299.

CAUTION.

The public is cautioned against employing any but the regularly authorized Agents of the Company, since the Roberts Patent cover the use of the Torpedo and all explosive materials for oil Well and the use of such materials by other parties is a direct infringment of their rights. Any parties infringing any of the ROBERTS PATENTS will be dealt with according to law and acting wilfully and knowingly in defiance of law and the decesions of the Courts.

The Company have re-organized their business with a view to accommodate Oil Men in every part of the Oil Region. They have employed the most efficient Agents and Assistants that can be procured for the business. Each Torpedo is labelled with date of patents, together with the price of the Torpedo, and signed by an officer of the Company, so every Operator wishing a Torpedo may know its price and whither it came from our office

Miscellaneous.

A young man who lost an arm in the Erie City (Pa.) Iron Works, a couple of weeks ago, still insists that he feels pain throughout the entire arm and fingers. Some twenty-four hours after the accident when the mutilated limb lay in the cellar, nearly beneath the bed where he lay, he would tell when one was handling it, by the painful sensation he felt. At one time a block was placed on the fingers to keep them straightened out, and, although he knew nothing of the transaction, he at once contended that something was pressing down his hand, and insisted that it should be removed at once. After the block was removed he said he felt easier, and was contented.

A man in Central New York is so unreasonable as to ask for a divorce merely because when he refused to give his wife money to set up as a physician she hankered a man down with a steel trap, threw all the dinner dishes and knives at her husband, chased a farmer with an axe, and chopped off a young man's fingers.

The New Bedford people must be very forbearing and patient. A gentleman in that city is very ill, and four sections of a street have been boarded up to make the house quiet. The Standard, however, has lost patience, and says such cases are altogether too common. Fences are put across where people are "comfortably sick," and recently in the north part of the city two sections of street were crossed four weeks because a woman had a very severe boil on her neck, which was possibly dangerous a few days.

It is estimated that kerosene causes twelve fatal accidents daily in the United States.

The Boston Transcript says: "Small women seldom dress well, and the reason is that they imagine themselves as tall as any one else."

A contemporary says: "It is pleasant for lovers to sit on the porch these evenings, and be happy in the thought that their blood is commingling in the same mosquito."

The War Department has ordered that in every case where a disbursing officer shall be caught betting at cards or any game of hazard, his functions shall be suspended, and he will be ordered to turn over all funds in his keeping; that he shall be brought to trial before a general court martial by the department commander, and will not be assigned to duty or again put in possession of public funds, subsequent to his trial, without the approval of the Secretary of War.

The youngest elopement on record took place at Hudson, Mich., last week. Master Frederick Tubbs of that town, aged five years, took Miss Schermerhorn, aged three years, combed her hair, put the doll's things in a box, and proceeded with her to the depot, where they got on the rear platform of the western bound train without being noticed, till the conductor received a dispatch for them.

The Sheboygan Herald has the following: "An honest, hard-working boy of the city attended the 'wizard' show the other night, and was so much taken with the specious idea of drawing $40, that he invested $3 in tickets the next night. He drew thirty blanks, a skimmer, and a curycomb."

Friday afternoon, in the broiling sun, Mr. Kildare, of La Grange, Ohio, attempted to walk fifty miles within ten consecutive hours, on the Union Course, for $200, offered by Mr. Fleming, of Patterson, N. J. Kildare drank ice water too freely, and in the 28th mile sank exhausted and was carried off the course by Messrs. Smith and Hanley.

The progress in marine guns during the last decade has been very great. In 1859, the 68-pounder cast iron gun was the most powerful weapon. At present there are 600-pounder 25-ton guns, besides 18-ton, 12-ton, 9-ton, and 6½-ton guns. The lightest of these is more powerful than the 68-pounder, and could pierce 4½ inches armor on a ship's side at 200 yards, while the 25-ton gun would probably pierce most iron-clads at a range of two miles.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Boston Advertiser, describing the Yarmouth camp-meeting, says that at the opening of the services the following telegram to the camp meeting in Illinois was sent:

"DESPLAINES, Ill., Aug. 15.

"To Rev. W. T. Harlow:

"A wonderful victory! Glory! Glory! Glory! to the Lamb!

[Signed] J. L. INSKIP."

To this dispatch the following equal coherent response was made:

"Yarmouth, in the possession of conscious victory, shouts back to Desplaines—Glory! Glory! Glory! to the Lamb!"
